Greetings GW History Majors/Minors, Phi Alpha Theta Members, and Others!

Are you interested in becoming a Managing, Senior or Associate Editor for The George Washington University Historical Review? If so, the Review is now accepting applications for Managing, Senior, and Associate Editor positions! As a member of the review team, you will not only improve your own writing but also gain skills that will appeal to graduate schools and prospective employers.

The responsibilities of each position are as follows:

- Managing Editor – assisting Editor-in-Chief with Senior and Associate Editor applications, ensuring editors meet deadlines, making final, extensive edits to chosen submissions
- Senior Editor – editing the content, organization, and substance of your peers’ submissions
- Associate Editor – revising the grammar, structure, and citations of your peers’ submissions

We will begin working on the Review in late May until the end of October.

Please send your applications to gwhistoricalreview@gmail.com by March 22nd at 11:59 pm with “Editor Application” in the subject line. In the body of the email please include:

- The position for which you intend to apply.
- Your name, year, and expected graduation date. At the time of application, you must be a first-year, sophomore, or junior.
- A resume and cover letter outlining your summer availability. You would work remotely.
- A writing sample in Chicago-Style that includes the class for which and professor for whom you wrote the paper and the grade received (if applicable).
- A revised copy of “Editing Practice.” Please download the document from the journal’s webpage. Open it in Microsoft Word, go to the “Review” bar, and use “Track Changes” to show how you have fixed any grammar, word choice, comma splices, dangling modifiers, or content (edit, omit, add sentences, if need be), etc.
